AFP clears four generals

Too little, too late, says opposition of Mayuga report

By TJ Baramba, Michael Lim Ubao and Lugo A. del Puerto

OPPOSITION SENATORS WEREN'T A BIT surprised by the report of a military fact-finding board that cleared three generals accused of helping President Macapagal-Arroyo rig the 2004 presidential election.

An opposition congressman said it was a case of "too little, too late."

"What took Malabonog so long to authorize the release of the report [on the wiretapping scandal]? If it's correct, that these generals are indeed innocent, withholding the answer for months was most unfair to them as they were left twisting in the wind during the interim," Panatagosa Rep. Rodolfo Blanes said.

Sen. Rodolfo Blanes said that as expected, too little, too late.

Top brass avoid media, release report on gov't TV

Palace assures 6 sure of awards; more eyed

By Gil C. Cabacungan Jr. and Christine Avendaño

MANILA (AP) — THE PALACE ASSURED YESTERDAY ALL BUT confirmed that it would be adding more names to the list of National Artists awarded this year, even as it insisted that the process of choosing the final list of recipients was not yet complete.

In a bid to explain the snafu that followed the Palace move to withdraw the announcement of the awardees only hours after making it public the other day,

Executive Secretary Eduardo Ibarra clarified that the confirmation of the award on the six nominees, led by the late actor-director Fernando Poe Jr., would remain, despite speculations that some of the names would be taken out.

In fact, there might soon be more names to be announced, which was why the announcement of the list of awardees was "premature," Ibarra said.

Celeste Guebara, the president of the National Artists Commission, said...

A fourth general with supposed links to the opposition was also shocked. Navy chief Vice Admiral Mauro Alayon, who headed the five-man fact-finding board, avoided media grilling by announcing the findings over the government television station last night.

The last finding body cleared Army chief Lt. Gen. Hermogenes Espino, Southern Command chief Lt. Gen. Gabriel Habon and retired Lt. Gen. Roy Quinsion of allegations that they took part in cheating for Mr. Arroyo.

Judas phallic rites symbol of protest

By Rosario C. Lucero

(An award-winning reporter and journalist, the author has a Ph.D. in English and is professor of Philippine Studies at UP Diliman. The following is a digest of a lecture she delivered last month at the UP College of Arts and Letters.)

IN RURAL PHILIPPINES, WHERE THE mall is not yet the hub of all activity, Black Saturday is the quietest day of the year. It is a day of solemnity and reflection on everyone's death.

But in a remote town in Pampanga, a day of the people's energy centers around the making of a giant effigy, parts of which various barrios folk contribute. Then, at 6 p.m., in the evening, the giant effigy of Judas—with a giant wooden phallus sticking out through a slit in his robe—is paraded around the barrio with much noise and fanfare. The parade ends at the barrio plaza, where a crowd of tall bamboo poles has been erected and from which dangles a mass of about 100. The mass is dipped around Judas's neck, a fan dipped around Judas's neck, a fan dipped around Judas's neck, a fan dipped around Judas's neck.

HE'S HOT Judas' effigy is burned; his phallic penis bleeds.

Businessmen's solomonic wisdom lends to 'Nanay'

By Maiche S. Rivera

THESE WHO ARE KIND TO THE POOR lend to the Lord, King Solomon said. There is a group of businessmen in the Philippines that has taken this to heart.

The Brotherhood of Christian Entrepreneurs and Professionals (BCEP), a big but low-key group of 30,000 entrepreneurs and professionals, has been putting its money where its mouth is for three years now.

The BCEP has released some P4.7 million in loans to 1,389 businesses in poor communities through its Eco-Reach Program's Nanay Project, a livelihood initiative exclusively for micro-enterprises.

First launched in 2003, the Nanay Project lends an initial amount of P2,000 to a borrower who has a micro-enterprise or proposed small business.

Traders seek experts' help to check peso appreciation

By Ronald R. Davao

THE INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATION of local exporters called on the country's top economists to find ways to help stabilize the peso-dollar exchange rate which rose sharply in a recent period to the detriment of their businesses.

Gregorio E. Ordoñez Jr., president of the Philippine Exporters Association in Manila, said the Philippine Economic Society "had the better idea to be pulled" toward the exporters.

Ordoñez said an analysis by the society's economists showed the country's trade deficit was the cause of the peso's appreciation, which cost exporters dearly.

"We need an exchange rate that balances the requirements of the country's economy and the dollar earners and local businessmen," he said, adding that a rise over the P11.50 level means losses for exporters.

Ordoñez said the exporters' association would submit the competition of the nation's goods, services, human and natural resources, and financial resources.

The Philippine Exporters Association said the group for the government to "adjust exchange policies to balance the interests of other sectors of the economy with the interests of the exporters and the level of the peso-dollar exchange rate that depends on foreign industries."

Infrastructure projects

The group had also called for the government to speed up the completion of the infrastructure projects in the country.

Abstract

Abstract—Concurrent engineering (CE) is a process of product development that integrates product design and manufacturing processes. CE is a key to achieving product development goals. This paper presents a review of CE research and practice. The review is organized into three main sections: (1) CE concepts and definitions, (2) CE implementation, and (3) CE challenges and future research. The first section discusses the origins of CE, its evolution, and its current state. The second section discusses the implementation of CE, including the roles of various stakeholders, the use of information technology, and the development of CE standards. The third section discusses the challenges of CE, including the need for cross-functional collaboration, the need for data integration, and the need for process integration. The paper concludes with a discussion of future research in CE.

New rob charge filed vs 'Pajero lady'

Telltale list found in seized van suggests her operation is Metrowide

By Tara V. Galante

A LIST OF NAMES AND ADDRESSES FOUND in police records of a seized van has strengthened suspicion that the notorious "Pajero lady" operated a wide area in Metro Manila.

Manila police chief Gen. Sgt. Marston Matala said yesterday a blue book containing the list was found inside the Toyota Innova of Lourdes de Guzman, who was arrested last week and suspected of being behind several robberies.

She was released early Tuesday morning after the return of a house in which she lives in Taguig in Manila City, caught in the act of slipping through their vigilantes.

Tagged "Pajero lady" for using such a vehicle to enter poor villages where she would proceed to rob houses, de Guzman was caught in the house of businessman Jose Ching on Main Street, Balara Village in Manila City.

Blue book

Matala said the blue book had a list of names, addresses, and telephone numbers. "We believe these are her targets. We will call up the numbers to find out if they had been robbed," he said.

Police said her gang Toyota Innova (2000-2006) was parked some 60 meters away from the Ching residence. Matala said the laptop found in the Innova would be used as evidence.

"To show she is not only operating in Manila, but around Metro Manila. We also found some evidence for entry to villages in Pasig, Pateros and Quezon cities in the blue book," said the police chief. Matala could not say exactly how many addresses were on the list, estimating there were more than a hundred entries. "We must have found the names and addresses in the telephone directory," he said.

Matala said part of her media approach could be to first call up the houses to check if anybody was home. If nobody would pick up, he said, the Innova would then proceed to rob the place.

Other cases

De Guzman, 52, escaped on June 13, 2005 from the Congressional Building for Women in Manila's Quezon City where she was serving her sentence of six to 20 years imprisonment. She is also facing several criminal cases, including a robbery case in February 2, Baguio, Benguet, in Quezon City last year, for which she was charged.

The Manila Police Station filed yesterday another robbery charge against De Guzman, who is also suspected of robbing jewelry from the late Air Force colonel businessman Ramon Sison. Matala said Sison confirmed ownership of the jewelry found in the Guzman possession after her arrest.

Police are also looking for De Guzman's possible involvement in another robbery case in the village.

Indonesian military archer Gendut Rudi Pratomo, another late Air Force colonel, reportedly lost track and jewelry over the weekend while he was out of the country.

Fire prevention never too late

By Margot C. Ortiz

FIRE PREVENTION MEASURES MAY HAVE come a little late for firefighters who slithered from fire-ravaged cases on last week. "There are no cases only during the month of March, which is also the Prevention Month, but all year round," said Manila Fire, Balay Talyon vice president.

Balay Talyon recently held a workshop aimed at reaching fire safety to homeowners and office employees. The fire safety seminar was conducted by Chinese-Philippine volunteer firefighters.

The Chinese-Philippine volunteers stressed the importance of establishing a common meeting place for all members of a household in case of a fire. "The family should agree on only one person to go back to the house in case some one becomes still missing," he said.

Berlusconi refuses to concede

ROME—PRIME MINISTER SILVIO BERLUSCONI refused to surrender Italy's election Tuesday, alleging "irregularities" in a vote that gave a rout to the governing center-left bloc.

"We cannot recognize the outcome of an election where the results are so manifestly false," Berlusconi said Tuesday.

Berlusconi denied the prospect of declaring invalid the postal votes for some 1.5 million Italians abroad. Instead, he said, he would demand a new election.

"We have fought for a great many things, but the great thing is that we have not been able to win the election," Berlusconi said. "We have not been able to win the election."

He even offered the image of a German-style "grand coalition" as a means to ensure a stable government.

"I think maybe we should think about the possibility of a grand coalition," he said.

Italy's new parliament is expected to meet in May. Berlusconi's coalition has a slim majority in the lower house.

must be secured for a government to take office.

But Berlusconi said the idea of setting up government with Berlusconi's coalition was "not realistic."

"We cannot have this election with a grand coalition," he said. "We cannot have this election with a grand coalition."

Suicide bombers kill 57 in Karachi

HOLYWAR group during the funeral of three victims of the suicide attack. April 11, in Karachi. Police officers closed schools in Karachi to prevent protests by Muslims over the attack.

KARACHI—THE DEATH TOLL FROM A SUICIDE bomb attack on a Sattai Muslims prayer meeting rose on Wednesday to 57 in the southern Pakistani city of Karachi, where officials said they were on high alert for more violence.

Thursday's attack by two suspects of suicide bombers was the worst ever in Karachi, which has been plagued by sectarian violence and Islamist militant operations designed by President Pervez Musharraf's support for the U.S.-led war on terrorism.

"The death toll rose from 37, while there are still missing," Islamabad's media spokesman of the provincial Muslim government said.

The local investigators suggest that there were at least two suicide bombers involved in the attack. He has found the body parts, including the head, of the suspected bomber.

The attack took place in a busy 15,000-sq-meter area in a busy

The city was under a state of emergency, with police and paramilitary forces patrolling the streets, and many schools and offices of Islamic institutions were closed.

Dozens of people gathered around the bomb site, looking at the badly damaged mosque and the hundreds of dead bodies lying on the ground, some of them still in the hands of the police.

The attack was the deadliest in the city since 1993, when a suicide bomber killed 13 people and injured 100 others in a crowded market.

Howard to face questioning over Iraq kickbacks

WASHINGTON—ALLEGATIONS THAT Prime Minister John Howard will be questioned on Thursday at an official inquiry into alleged kickbacks by the United Kingdom's defense industry to the British government in return for the supply of arms to the United States.

The inquiry, headed by former Supreme Court Judge Justice Gumm, has no political bias and was only recommended previously by the House of Commons in 1999.

Mr. Howard will be questioned by the House of Commons on the alleged kickbacks, but no intention to prosecute Howard on the matter.

Yao slated to undergo foot surgery

HOUSTON—HUSTON ROCKETS CENTER Yao Ming will have surgery this weekend on the broken left foot and the injury could take him out of the season, said general manager Daryl Morey on Tuesday.

"You can't find out more," Morey said. "You could just put a cast on it, but it's worse than that. It's not known if the surgery will prevent him from playing in the NBA Finals Championship in June, which begins Aug. 17."

Earlier this season, Yao missed 21 games after having surgery to remove an infection from the left leg in June. Since the 2005-06 season, Yao has led one of the league's top performers, averaging 26.5 points and 11 rebounds.

Disrupted from playoff contention, the Rockets have four games left in their playoff rematch series, starting Wednesday game against the Spurs.

Leading scorer Tracy McGrady has missed 30 games while scoring 208 points. As a whole, Houston players have missed 204 games in 15 games.

NBA expands to 13 players

NEW YORK—THE NORTHEASTERN BOSTON will expand to 13 this season, with teams allowed to play before the playoffs.

The 13th player franchise team will be allowed to enter during the playoffs. In the past, they had to wait with the same 12-man team throughout the playoffs.

The new rule was approved by the board of governors and announced on Tuesday.

NBA spokesman Tim Burch said the change was made to give teams the same kind of team that they had during the regular season. Under the new collective bargaining agreement, teams were expanded to 13, with 12 players and 13th player for better coverage.

The regular season ends on April 19, and the playoffs begin three days later.

Stars involved in global camps

NEW YORK—STEVE NASH WILL RETURN to his hometown of New York City to lead the Nets during the playoffs.

The basketball international camp, in its 10th year, will feature about 200 players and 100 coaches from 120 players, coaches and team personnel from around the world.

The camp also will go to Japan and France for the first time. It also will return to China, where the Nets played last year. Yao Ming will lead the group that goes to the Chinese city of Shanghai. Last year's camp was in Beijing.

NBA announced Tuesday that the program "internationally involved."

Stage parents revel in reflected glory

NOT THAT TRUMPET-BLASTING HANEY became a very big deal and, as a result, a new breed of showbiz parents is blossoming. These are the showbiz parents who have produced stage parents.

Now, stage parents have been called out for promoting, oversteering the first child away from the family or pushing them into a line of a flourishing film business. The television has even produced stage parents, as well as their negative influence and effect.

These were when young stars' parents have their place and played out the TV camera's reach. They were out there to enjoy the fruits of their labor, winning A-list roles, and left the public astonished at their stellar children.

These days, however, TV refers to them as regular, old-fashioned parents as they insist on their children to do well, as they can continue to enjoy the fruits of their success.

And TV is so powerful that even such cynical and detour stars eventually make minor celebrities of the stage parents themselves.

In time, they begin to be recognized by name, and their role in the glory, although it may be.

But that, it is only a matter of time before the stage parents start playing an even bigger role in their children's lives, and they begin to play in the glory, although it may be.

It is not any more of this spectacle of depicting the lives of the stars, but it is the lives of the stars' parents.

First, TV shows the lives of the stars' parents.

RP to retire $411M in Brady bonds

Sending positive signal to investors

By Davis C. Dumlao

THE PHILIPPINE GOVERNMENT HAS decided to retire up to $411 million in US Treasury bonds.

The retirement of these bonds through an auction allows the Philippines to replace the debt with longer maturity bonds.

Following the auction, the Philippines would be able to retire up to $411 million in US Treasury bonds.

The retirement of these bonds through an auction allows the Philippines to replace the debt with longer maturity bonds.

"This program will reduce foreign debt and send a positive signal to investors," the source said.

At the same time, the source said the government would be able to replace the Brady bonds with longer maturity bonds.

The Brady bonds have become more expensive compared to newly issued bonds.

According to all American holding the $411 million Brady bonds, the Philippines would be able to retire up to $411 million in US Treasury bonds.

The retirement of the outstanding interest, which will reduce the BrD's gross international reserves, will maintain the foreign exchange reserves from the foreign exchange.

The government had wanted to retire the $474 million in outstanding Brady bonds.

The Philippines issued a total of $4.35 billion worth of Brady bonds between 1990 and 1992 as a debt restructuring program.

The Brady bonds were named after Nicholas Brady, the Treasury chief of the United States during the tenure of President Ronald Reagan who proposed the creation of these bonds to help heavily indebted countries like the Philippines restructure their commercial bank debt starting in the 1980s.

Since Latin American countries had used the same Brady bond program strategy, the government had decided to retire the $411 million in outstanding interest.

Gov't bucks diversion of Malampaya income

By Michelle Y. Reyes

THE DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE has approved a proposal from Congress to allocate revenues being collected by the national government from the Malampaya gas project for the maintenance of the country's Armed Forces.

The DOF said the legislative proposal would divert the government's expenditure program, under which the national government's share of income from Malampaya has already been allocated for energy revenue development projects of the Department of Energy.

located for energy revenue development projects of the Department of Energy.

House Bill No. 4238, submitted by House Majority Leader, will require the national government to place in a trust account the Malampaya gas project income for the maintenance of the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

The national government has a 62.5 percent share of the gross income from Malampaya. The rest is divided among private sector companies, the local government of Palawan and operating costs.
